Fund commentary

Global bond markets sold off in December 2022, driven mainly by hawkish comments from the Bank of Japan and ECB. Bond volatility was broad based with 5y yields in the US Treasury market for example hitting 4.0% and the 30-year nearing 4.0% after the latter had traded as low as 3.4% at the beginning of the month.

In the Fund, negative movers over the month included Energy bonds and US high yield paper. The rate volatility impacted Real Estate and medium dated HY paper such as Avis and Hertz. Energy names traded down driven by an oil price that has hit levels seen prior to the Russian invasion of Ukraine. Positive movers in the month included LNG/Tankers and non-real estate Corporate Hybrids. Golar LNG's bond price was boosted nearly 5pts by a Dutch Auction whereby $140m of its $300m 2025 bonds were bought back at 100.0. Separately, EDF issued a call notice for its EDF 5.25% Corporate Hybrids following a successful issuance of a new Hybrid in November which sent its bonds tighter. Other non real-estate hybrids rallied due to the positive market technical such that bonds are being called but issuance is low. A number of issuers in the portfolio displayed credit positive characteristics, e.g. Vodafone tendered for $2.1bn of USD senior bonds and American Airlines ("American") repaid a $1.18 billion term loan due in December 2023 one year early. American has publicly committed to paying down about $15 billion of its total debt by the end of 2025. Overall positioning consisted of a weighted average duration of 2.1, portfolio yield of 6.4%, cash and government bonds of over 45%. The team believes the Fund is in a strong position to take advantage of any meaningful credit spread volatility to invest in quality high yielding credits that can generate attractive multi-year returns.

Market commentary

Bond yields rose again in December, for the most part maintaining the upward trend which began in early 2022. The Federal Reserve slowed the pace of its rate hikes to 50bp as expected but once again emphasised that rates may rise to higher levels and remain there for a longer period than the market expects. Nevertheless the market continued to price rate cuts into the second half of 2023. The ECB also hiked by 50bp as was expected, but sounded more hawkish with respect to future rate hikes and also delivered more concrete and immediate plans for commencing QT than many had expected. Yields were broadly stable in the first half of the month but then started to move higher in the second half following the Fed and ECB meetings. The BOJ then surprised markets with a hawkish tilt to its policy and widened the 10y yield band to +/-50bp from +/-25bp. Japanese bonds immediately traded up from the old 25bp limit to close to the new 50bp limit, and global bond markets sold off as this move was viewed as a further step in the end of easy money policies. US CPI came in lower than expected, giving further credence to the view that inflation may have peaked. On the other hand, the Atlanta Fed's sticky CPI measure, which measures inflation components which are slow to change, set a new cycle high, lending weight to the Fed's warning that rates may have to remain elevated for an extended period to get inflation under control. The labour market in the US remained strong as Non-Farm Payrolls once again beat expectations, although there was an increasing level of discomfort with the difference between the employment growth shown by the establishment survey and the relatively static levels of employment shown by the household survey. In Europe while CPI remains elevated, efforts to reduce usage, increase stockpiles, secure alternative sources and relatively warm weather meant that natural gas prices declined to 10-month lows. Indeed December saw the largest monthly decline in European natural gas futures on record. China's COVID reopening gained steam as many restrictions were eased. Optimism over the impact of increased activity was tempered somewhat by a massive wave of COVID infections which itself limited activity. Over the course of the month US 10y yields were 27bp higher at 3.87% and German 10y bunds led the charge, with yields rising by 64bp to 2.57%, the highest since 2011. Equities declined in general on the more hawkish central banks and mixed views over the impact of China's reopening. The S&P 500 declined by 5.9% while the German DAX was lower by 3.3%. In China the Shanghai Composite fell by 2.0% while the Hang Seng index rose by 6.4% on gains in the tech sector. Oil was little changed on the month, finishing 0.4% lower. The DXY continued recent weakness with the index falling 2.3% as the EUR gained 2.9% and the JPY gained 5.0% against the USD. Risk assets are still pricing the relatively benign scenario where inflation moderates without a severe economic downturn and central banks ease their tightening stance. Attention will be paid to incoming employment and inflation data to see if this outcome is supported by the data.
