Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (USD Class A)

Fund commentary

The Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (USD Class A) returned -0.27% in November, bringing YTD performance to +0.28%.

Weak oil prices, global tariff trade angst, continued Brexit withdrawal agreement uncertainty, and reduced investor demand as we approach year-end contributed to a widening of global credit spreads in November. In this context, the Fund's relatively modest portfolio duration of 2.2 and large number of maturing positions in the final few months of the year enabled mark-to-market drawdown to be reasonably well contained. It is currently a buyers' market in corporate credit for those with liquidity to put to work. As is custom, the Fund remains price sensitive when investing in new positions. ON the back of the continued widening of bond yields the Fund in November was able to acquire short-duration investment-grade positions with USD yields of 5.00% plus.

As we approach 2019, we observe that the Fund's USD adjusted portfolio yield is now 4.89%, which is some 120 bps higher than at the start of 2018. At the same time, overall portfolio duration has declined to just 2.2. Given this favourable mix, and the potential for further opportunities to arise in the coming months and quarters, the outlook for investors over the medium we believe remains strong.

Market commentary

Markets in November were once again impacted by geopolitical developments. The US administration's hostile approach to global trade continues to shape sentiment and while much concern remains over the ability of Presidents' Trump and Xi to reach an agreement, the recent arrest of the Huawei CFO in connection to sanction violations has exacerbated the situation. In Europe Brexit remains in clear focus. Despite agreement between Theresa May and Europe on a withdrawal plan, the likelihood of parliamentary approval remains very much in the balance. At this juncture it is difficult to identify the most likely outcome with possibilities ranging from no deal to no Brexit. Continued tension in Europe between the Italian government and the EU commission over Italy's budget deficit has also kept Italian government spreads elevated. US economic data was mixed throughout November with strong inflation reading of 2.5% tempered by the significant drop in the oil price. Elsewhere weak homebuilding data showed that perhaps higher rates are beginning to weigh on the economy. Europe continues to lag on the data front as Germany QoQ GDP registered a -0.2% decline along with a sharp drop in 3rd quarter industrial production. A revealing speech by Fed Chair Powell at the Economic Club in New York suggested rates were "just below" neutral, with rate hike expectations for 2019 subsequently dropping. Furthermore the probability of a December rate hike, previously a cast iron certainty, fell to 64%. In spite of this dovish sentiment however, market volatility has spiked with risk assets coming under increasing pressure. As such we are left to consider whether we are witnessing another short-term correction or something more fundamental in nature.
