Fund commentary

Global credit markets began 2026 in broadly positive fashion with credit spreads tightening to multi-decade lows in some cases, despite consistent primary issuance. Higher beta performance was mixed relative to safer IG and leveraged loans were a notable underperformer amidst deteriorating fundamentals among lower rated creditors. EUR markets in both IG and HY outperformed US and GBP. The Fund generated a positive return in the month. Within the Fund, corporate bond exposure and overall duration were at 70% and 2.2 respectively. Following record fixed income supply in 2025, the new year began with no sign of a slowdown. Global bond issuance hit a record $260bn in the first week of January, the highest level ever for this period. The week also included the largest single-day issuance on record in Europe, at €61bn, while total issuance in the euro area reached a monthly record of €356bn across sovereign and credit markets. In the US, high-yield issuance totalled $30bn during the month, running around 30% ahead of the 2025 pace, while investment-grade bond sales exceeded $200bn for only the sixth time on record. Credit spreads tightened modestly during the month, but with spreads already at multi-year lows, the incremental contribution to performance was limited. US high-yield bonds nonetheless extended their rally for a ninth consecutive month, the longest such run since 2021. The spread compression occurred despite clear headwinds: the sheer volume of issuance presents ongoing technical challenges as markets absorb hundreds of billions of dollars of new supply, while concerns persist around the resilience of mid- and lower-quality issuers. High-profile stress cases, including Tricolor and First Brands, have underscored these risks, and 2025 also marked the first year since 2020 in which fallen angels outnumbered rising stars.

Market commentary

January 2026 began with US macro signals gradually regaining clarity after the record federal shutdown, though several releases arrived late and analysts continued to flag residual data distortions from disrupted collection. Labour indicators pointed to subdued but steady conditions: Nonfarm payrolls increased by 50k, while the unemployment rate edged down to 4.4%. Job openings fell to 7.15m in November and jobless claims hovered around the 200k mark in mid January, consistent with a "low fire, low hire" backdrop rather than a pronounced deterioration. Inflation readings were more constructive: core CPI rose 0.2% m/m in December and held at 2.6% y/. Activity remained two speed, with manufacturing still in contraction (ISM 47.9) even as services expanded at the fastest pace in more than a year (ISM 54.4). Consumer spending held up—retail sales rose 0.6% in November—yet confidence deteriorated sharply, with the Conference Board index falling to 84.5, its lowest since 2014. Monetary policy was the month's focal point. The Federal Reserve held the funds rate at 3.5%–3.75% in a 10–2 vote, with Chair Powell pointing to a "clear improvement" in the outlook and suggesting policy is now within the range of neutral. The decision came amid heightened political pressure, as the Department of Justice served the Fed grand jury subpoenas related to Powell's testimony on headquarters renovations. Against that backdrop, the administration named a successor in Kevin Warsh. President Trump's pursuit of Greenland dominated headlines at the World Economic Forum in Davos. He threatened 10% tariffs—rising to 25% in June—on eight European nations opposing his bid to acquire the territory, sparking backlash from NATO allies and prompting the EU to prepare retaliatory measures on €93 billion of US goods. Days later, Trump abruptly reversed course. Separately, US forces invaded Venezuela and captured President Maduro, with Trump announcing plans to control Venezuelan oil exports and direct proceeds toward rebuilding the country. In the euro area, macro data were steady though politics dominated. Inflation eased back to the ECB's 2% target in December, with core at 2.3%, while euro area GDP grew 0.3% in Q4 and the January composite PMI held at 51.5. Elsewhere, Japan moved into election mode as Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi called a Feb. 8 snap vote and campaigned on a two year cut to the food sales tax—officials estimated the cost at around ¥5tn per year—with funding still unclear. The BOJ signalled its rate hike path remains intact, while holding rates unchanged. In Canada, Prime Minister Mark Carney used Davos to urge middle powers to resist coercion and pursued closer trade ties with China, calling it a "more predictable" partner—drawing warnings from Trump ahead of USMCA talks. The Bank of Canada held rates at 2.25%, citing elevated uncertainty over trade policy.
