

Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (Class PC GBP)

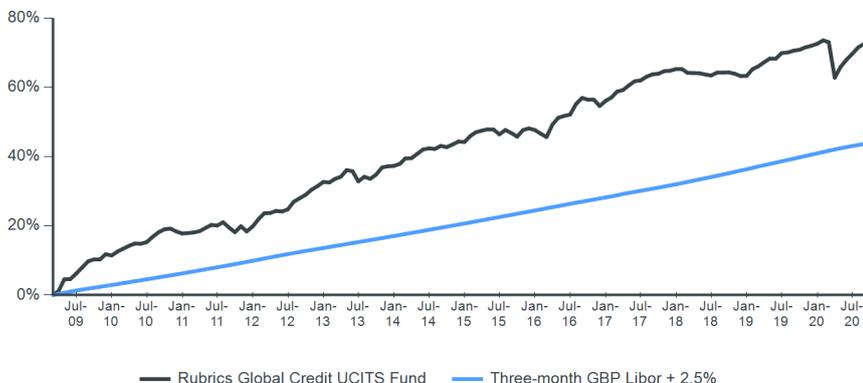

Objective

The Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (the "Fund") invests in a diversified, global portfolio of high-quality credits. The Fund pursues a total return, non-benchmarked strategy with a strong capital preservation emphasis. We maintain a low-duration portfolio bias, usually around three years. Our target return is equal to cash plus 2.5% over the medium term.

Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (Class PC GBP)

Fund commentary

The Rubrics Global Credit UCITS Fund (GBP Class PC) returned +0.58% in August, bringing YTD return to +0.01%. Continuing the theme observed in recent months, global credit markets performed solidly, an outcome benefiting several of the Fund's holdings.

New investment activity during the month was modest, though the Fund did participate in some new investment-grade bond issues. Towards the end of August, we also took advantage of a meaningful sell-off in longer dated US Treasuries as it provided a welcome opportunity to initiate bond positions in some recent corporate bond issues some 6-8 points below recent highs. We purchased highly rated senior unsecured bonds in some large and well-known companies, namely Apple, Amazon, Alphabet (Google), Visa and AstraZeneca. Along with a continuation of expected call activity in some corporate hybrids, corporate treasurers continue to be active in opportunistic tender offers in resilient and well performing companies. In August and early September tender offers were made in the Fund's holdings in one-year Enel and five-year BHP corporate hybrid paper. As we have remarked previously, attractively priced voluntary tenders regularly create meaningful yield compression, thereby aiding Fund NAV and enabling cash to be redeployed into new investment opportunities. The duration of the fund remains modest at around 2.50, with September representing a big month of organic maturities for the portfolio. Accordingly, we are well placed to take on investments in either new issues, potential idiosyncratic opportunities, or if valuations more generally cheapen up.

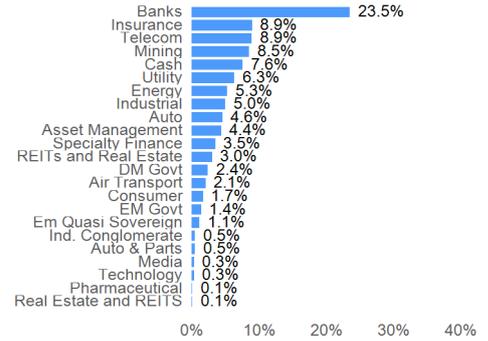

Market commentary

August saw a relentless move higher in equity markets driven mainly by the large tech companies. The S&P 500 finally took out the pre-COVID high and spent the last 10 days of the month setting new record highs on an almost daily basis, unperturbed by any negative news flow. The COVID pandemic continued to spread although the pace of new infections in the US slowed and India became a new focus as a COVID hotspot with infections growing rapidly. There was also some concern about a second wave of infections in Europe but broad lockdowns have been averted for now. In the US there was much focus on negotiations for a new fiscal stimulus package but there was no agreement between the House of Representatives, the Senate and the White House. The US presidential election came into focus as both parties held their conventions and formally nominated the candidates. On the monetary policy front the main focus in August was on the virtual Jackson Hole symposium where Jerome Powell somewhat surprisingly announced the results of the Federal Reserve's review of the monetary policy framework. The policy will now use a form of average inflation targeting, allowing inflation to run above target for some time after a period of below target inflation, but without any specific formula to direct policy. In reality this just formalises what much of the market expected the Federal Reserve to do in any case. The other change was that policy will react to shortfalls to maximum employment rather than to deviations from maximum employment, meaning the policy reaction will be to ease when unemployment is high but not necessarily to tighten when unemployment is low in the absence of inflationary pressure. Yields moved higher post Jackson Hole although most of the move over the month had taken place in advance of the symposium. US 10y yields were 13bp higher to 0.70%. In the equity space the S&P 500 was higher by 7.0% with the tech focused NASDAQ up to 9.6%. In Europe the DAX was higher by 5.1% and the FTSE 100 was just 1.1% higher as the strength of GBP weighed on the index. The other major theme of August was the weakness in the USD, which fell by 1.3% as measured by the DXY index, driven by gains in the EUR and GBP. Economic data for the most part was decent with US employment data beating expectations although jobless claims remain stubbornly high. The outlook remains a concern as the lack of agreement on a fiscal package means incomes and therefore economic activity are likely to come under pressure. The US election campaign is now a major focus for markets with polls and predictions filling up inboxes. Whether US tech companies can maintain their lofty valuations and the economy can hold up with reduced fiscal support will also be key in determining the performance of risk assets in the coming months.
