Fund commentary

The Fund posted positive returns in May with exposure government securities the main driver. Overall duration was increased over the month from 4.8 years to approximately 5.1 years through the addition of 10-year German Bunds. Corporate exposure remained steady at approximately 14.6%. In terms of performance the impact of the decline in government bond yields drove approximately 2/3 of the Fund's returns while the income/carry effect contributed the remainder.

Global bond markets diverged in performance somewhat in May as the US Treasury market outperformed reversing the hitherto trend of 2024. Driven by a weaker than expected economic backdrop, US Treasury yields fell across the curve with 10-year Treasury yields declining 18 bps. German Bunds by contrast ended the month 3 bps higher as optimism over the number of forthcoming rate cuts faded in line with the stubborn inflation backdrop. As a result, longer duration US fixed income outperformed with the USD aggregate index, US BBBs and EM hard currency all delivering the strongest performance over the month. With credit spreads continuing to narrow, albeit marginally, it was a good month for higher yielding strategies with carry and a degree of spread compression underpinning the positive performance. Credit spreads in Investment Grade now account for only 18% of the overall yield - close to the all-time low. As a result, duration continues to be the predominant driver of performance on a month-to-month basis. Within US credit, the yield differential between the Bloomberg 1-3 Year Corporate Index and the 5-10-year Index is almost zero highlighting the lack of compensation for taking on additional duration risk. Elsewhere it was a very strong month for higher beta financials with AT1 bonds recording another gain. Spreads on the Bloomberg USD CoCo Index have compressed by over 200bps in the last 12 months and over 400bps since the highs of March 2023. Strong financials performance has no doubt fed into robust appetite for new issuance. Deutsche Bank's recent EUR AT1 deal was further evidence of this with €1.5bn of demand for a €1.5bn deal which, at 8.125%, came some 62.5 bps inside guidance. High yield markets continue to display signs of dispersion with distress in the CCC segment growing while BBs remain close to the tightness of 2021. The ratio between the two ratings components is at > 20yr highs (excluding the COVID period).

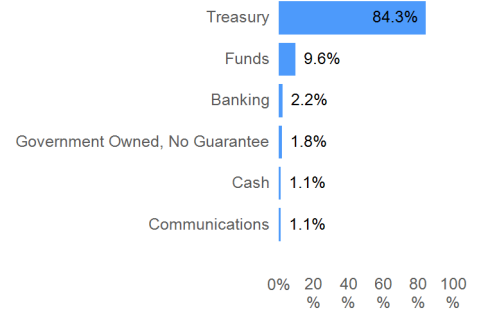

Market commentary

A softening of economic data in the US underpinned an improvement in the fortunes of the US bond market. Much of the decline was seen in softer survey data (both manufacturing and services PMI readings were weaker than expected), although headline jobs numbers are also starting to show signs of deterioration. As a result, markets had priced back in an additional rate cut to 2024 although with inflation pressures continuing to linger many at the Fed and in the broader market remain in the higher for longer camp. This was a theme in the Eurozone also as stickier than expected inflation readings have dampened expectations for the imminent arrival of a sustained rate cutting cycle from the ECB. Risk assets continued to trade well with the S&P 500 registering a 4.8% gain for May taking year-to-date performance to +11.3%. As has been well highlighted however, some 40% of the positive performance has been driven by the exceptional performance of Nvidia which has recently reached a staggering market capitalization of $3 trillion, up from $360bn at the end of 2022. Away from blue chip stocks, the 'real economy' continues to struggle relatively speaking with the Russell 2000 for example only marginally positive for 2024 (+2.7%). This dichotomy is also evident in the credit markets with close to 50% of the US High Yield construct trading inside 200bps spreads (close to a record high) while CCC spreads continue to move wider as signs of distress down the credit curve continue to mount.
